Chill wilts festival crowds

Tulips bloomed, but attendance didn't boom over Mother's Day weekend

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

For a decade now, Michelle Meyer and her sons Tristan, 13, and Raffi, 8, have been visiting the tulips in Commissioners Park on Mother's Day. Despite the winter-like conditions yesterday, they were not about to give up on that tradition.

"The weather is shocking cold, but it'd give me pause because it's the tradition in our family," said Meyer. "I have pictures of the kids every year, so we have to see the effects of their growth."

Most years, she buys the kids Popsicles, and they take pictures and wander amongst the tulips for a couple of hours.

Yesterday, it was just too cold for ice cream, so they decided to go with candy apples.

According to Environment Canada, the normal high for this weekend is around 18 C. For the first weekend on the Canadian Tulip Festival, the temperature barely rose above 5 C, which meant there were just as many toques as there were tulips.

So, while visitors to the tulip gardens in Commissioners Park had plenty of sympathy for ice cream vendor McKenzie Maxwell, few people were interested in buying her frozen treats. In the first two hours of her shift yesterday, she'd only sold two.

"It's better than I expected," she said, wearing a winter jacket, toque and red Olympic mittens. "Everyone walks by and says I should be selling hot chocolate. It's not a great day for selling ice cream."

Even the vendors who were selling hot chocolate weren't selling much.

"It's just too cold for people to come out," said Fred Murphy, who sells fudge, candy apples, cotton candy and hot chocolate. "All we need is nicer weather and the crowds will be here."

Murphy has been at the tulip festival for several years. He said there was less than a quarter of the usual crowd out yesterday, and Saturday was even worse.

Things should pick up by next weekend, when Environment Canada says highs will reach 16 C.

Explosive fire destroys city dump trucks

EMERGENCY The Ottawa fire department is investigating after an explosive fire destroyed five large dump trucks early yesterday morning, causing $1.5 million in damages.

The fire broke out at a City of Ottawa yard at 1683 Woodward Dr. at around 1:14 a.m.

About two dozen firefighters battled the blaze for an hour, working against high winds. The fire department said ruptured fuel tanks and the close proximity of the vehicles contributed to the number of trucks lost, but their efforts kept the fire from reaching a sixth vehicle in the row, and flaming fuel runoff from reaching other vehicles in the yard.

The fire is currently being assessed to determine the cause, said Ottawa fire Capt. Greg Golds.

Farmers' market aids popular 100-mile diet

Vendor finds interest growing in local foods

TRACEY TONG
tracey.tong@metronews.ca

Whenever possible, Stephane Lariviere buys locally produced food, even when it's more expensive.

The Gatineau resident, who estimates that half of the food he buys is locally produced, said it's a matter of health and supporting the local region.

"We don't really care about saving money," he said.

Lariviere was one of thousands of people who came out to the opening day of the Ottawa Farmers' Market at Lansdowne Park yesterday.

"I've noticed in the past year or two that we're getting a lot more interest in eating locally," said Mike Kositsin, a beekeeper from Ottawa Valley Honey in Arnprior.

The popular 100-mile diet — where people eat foods grown, produced and sold within 100 miles of their homes — is made easier by farmers' markets.

Aside from being touted as fresher and more environmentally and economically sustainable, there are health benefits people wouldn't expect, said Kositsin.

"When you're buying local honey, be it from me or anyone else, you're getting honey from the flowers that are in your area. So if you have pollen allergies, you can eat a little bit of honey from your local area daily, and over time, it would make your allergies less," he said.

Over at the Fitzroy Beef Farmers booth, most of farmer Danny Dolan's customers make it a point to buy local.

"There are no growth hormones in our animals and they're antibiotic free, where the stuff in the grocery store, it's more commercial and you don't know what's in it," said Dolan, who works 40 minutes west of Ottawa.

"When you're buying from us, you know exactly where it came from."

"I know exactly what goes into my products," said Isabel Pochadt of Dough and Beyond in Arnprior.

Most of the ingredients in her baked goods and preserves, including the flour, beans and dry goods, are locally sourced, she said, so when people support her, they're also supporting local farmers.

It's not just about food, said Kositsin. "Anything you can do local is better. If you start with your food and start branching it out into the rest of your life, that's how you make the economy sustainable."

4 in hospital after fatal collision

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

CRASH Two young men are dead and four adults remain in hospital yesterday after a two vehicle T-bone collision in south Ottawa on Saturday night.

Emergency crews responded to a call of a collision involving a Pontiac Sunfire and a Hyundai Santa Fe on Albion Road between Rideau Road and Mitch Owens Road at around 7:45 p.m.

The two male occupants of the Pontiac Sunfire, both around 18 years old, died from multi-system trauma.

The four occupants of the Sante Fe were all taken to hospital.

An 82-year-old female is in serious but stable condition after suffering head injuries.

A 56-year-old female suffered a severe chest injury and a fractured sternum and is in serious but stable condition.

A 67-year-old male and a 61-year-old female are also in stable condition in hospital.

Wage advocate runs for council

ELECTION Nadia Willard, one of the leading advocates for the living wage campaign in Ottawa, has registered to run for council in River Ward.

A retired nurse who served on the Saskatchewan Human Rights Committee and the Gabriel Springs Heath District Board, Willard also ran as a member of the Saskatchewan NDP in the province's 1999 election before moving to Ottawa.

Willard said the city needs to examine the services it should offer and ways, other than tax or fee increases, to fund those services.

The ward's current councillor, Maria McRae, is not registered but is expected to run. Michael Kostiuk is already registered.

Fudging the faith

Unemployed, non-religious educators in Ontario are turning to Catholicism in an attempt to secure a coveted teaching position, even if it means lying in confession about whether they've had pre-marital sex, some have revealed.

"I don't particularly like going (to mass) every Sunday, but if this is what I have to do, then I'll do it," said a Toronto-area woman, who didn't want to be identified. "I just really want to be in a career. I just want it so badly."

The teacher said she has also been going to confession regularly and speaking with a priest on a weekly basis in order to receive the documents she needs to apply to the Toronto Catholic District School Board. She is not Catholic — she doesn't consider herself religious.

> "I don't particularly like going (to mass) ... but if this is what I have to do, then I'll do it."
> Toronto-area teacher

The oversupply of qualified, unemployed teachers in Ontario has been a well-documented problem. According to the Ontario College of Teachers, there were about 12,200 new teachers in the province in 2009, but only about 5,000 positions.

"What you can see, fairly quickly, is you have twice as many teachers as you do job opportunities and that has been going on for a number of years now," said Frank McIntyre, a researcher for the college, who added the gap has been accelerating since 2005.

"We're getting a backlog of qualified teachers who are not able to get teaching jobs."

This has left teachers desperate, so they've decided to cast their net wide.

"You feel really helpless," said the teacher. "I thought, why not try this option. It was kind of out of desperation ... not that I think it will work for sure, but it's to have another option."

Pakistan asks for more help along Afghanistan border

TERRORISM Pakistan says a Canadian-led G8 initiative to rehabilitate its lawless Afghanistan border region doesn't go far enough to stamp out terrorism.

Islamabad has asked Ottawa to expand the scope of its plan, and is also concerned how it will be financed: Forcing Pakistan deeper into debt with international lenders, The Canadian Press has learned.

Pakistan says it's grateful for the Afghanistan-Pakistan Border Region Prosperity Initiative that was announced by G8 foreign ministers in March, but says it doesn't do enough to lift up the fortunes of the vulnerable, economically backward region that's now become a haven for al-Qaida terrorists.

Ottawa looks to box up shady movers

CRACKDOWN The federal government is putting the moves on movers.

Industry Canada wants to tighten the rules for moving companies after a deluge of complaints from consumers who say they've been ripped off by crooked operators.

Armed with a cellphone and a Kijiji or Craigslist ad on the Internet, scam artists are preying on Canadians looking for cheap moving help, says the department.

"Complaints include holding furniture hostage at the destination until consumers pay more than the original estimate and producing new hidden costs such as packaging," says an internal document.

Currently, regulation of the moving industry is a bit of a patchwork, and some industry players want the government to harmonize laws, regulations and practices across the country.

Danny's heavy hand

Premier's gaffes aren't shaking his hold

He's prone to flashes of temper and personal attacks, but Danny Williams says he still likes being Canada's most popular premier and wants a third term.

"I feel stronger, better than I ever did before," the Newfoundland and Labrador leader said last week.

"I know we've got a lot of issues in the province, but that's what the job is all about. And, you know, I enjoy that.

"We're 18 months from an election and we'll be good and ready," he said of the fixed dated vote planned for Oct. 11, 2011.

Questions were raised about the premier's demeanour after some especially nasty public tussles. He is also recovering from heart valve surgery in February — a procedure that sparked a medicare uproar because he chose to have it done in Florida. In recent weeks and days, Williams has made headlines for rhetorical attacks on doctors, a Quebec judge and a furious exchange in the legislature with NDP Leader Lorraine Michael.

Premier Danny Williams

Williams erupted last month under pointed questioning from Michael, a diminutive former nun. She asked when the premier would stop "grandstanding" and reach a deal with doctors ensnared in protracted, increasingly bitter contract talks with the province.

"This is about getting an agreement and bringing good health care to the people of the province — not playing cheap, dirty politics like you do," Williams yelled across the house of assembly. "Holier than thou, the member for Signal Hill-Quidi Vidi!"

But some political watchers wonder about the democratic toll of a premier who rules so absolutely. There are 43 Progressive Conservatives, four Liberals and one New Democrat in one of the most uneven legislatures in the country.

"The reality is that a friendly dictatorship definitely applies in this case," said Alex Marland, a political scientist at Memorial University.

VANCOUVER Vancouverites may want to thank a school of fertile herring for the rare chance to see Pacific white-sided dolphins and grey whales in the waters near the city recently, according to a scientist with the Vancouver Aquarium.

Lance Barrett-Lennard, head of the whale and dolphin research program, said while it's not uncommon to see these animals off the coast, they don't tend to venture so close to the city.

On May 6, hundreds of dolphins were spotted swimming around Lion's Bay. The previous day, a grey whale was seen in False Creek.

"It could be a coincidence," Barrett-Lennard said. "It could, however, be (because) there has been a good herring spawn this year in Howe Sound and False Creek."

Grey whales and dolphins, he said, are very "motivated" by herring, which have a high caloric count. The whales — which eat herring eggs — may be especially hungry, Barrett-Lennard added, since they're migrating to Alaska from Mexico where they have been fasting for months.

"Over the past few years we've seen a group of about 70 or 80 around Powell River and Nanaimo. We've never seen 150 and never in Howe Sound," he said.

Faster Internet stretches farther

INTERNET The federal government plans to expand broadband Internet access to several rural and remote locations across the country, Industry Minister Tony Clement said yesterday. Fifty-two projects are "conditionally approved" to receive funding of $76.7 million, he said. It's estimated 22 per cent of rural households don't have broadband, which enables downloading.

BP to try containment again

GULF OF MEXICO Crews planned yesterday to offload equipment that could be used in a new attempt to stem the flow of oil gushing into the Gulf of Mexico after BP's first attempt to use a giant containment box to divert the crude was foiled by ice.

There was a renewed sense of urgency as thick blobs of tar washed up on Alabama's white sand beaches, yet another sign the spill was spreading.

It could be at least a day before BP can make another attempt at putting a lid on a well spewing thousands of gallons of crude into the Gulf each day. Waves of sludge crashed into a boat in the area above the leak. The fumes there were so intense that a crewmember on board had to wear respirators while outside. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Russia Attacks upstage holiday

People watch fireworks in Moscow's Red Square yesterday to mark Victory Day, commemorating the 1945 defeat of Nazi Germany. A bomb exploded near a Russian military base, killing two people, and a soldier was killed in a separate blast in Moscow where a military parade bombing exactly eight years ago killed scores.

Blasts trap miners

Rescuers scrambling to free workers in Russia

Rescue workers scrambled to save 83 people trapped in Russia's largest underground coal mine after two explosions killed at least 12 people and injured dozens more, officials said. Among those still trapped were rescue workers who had entered the Siberian mine after the first blast.

"It's clear the situation is difficult. We could even say very difficult, tragic."
Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin

A high level of methane gas after yesterday's second, more powerful blast raised fears of further explosions and prevented more rescuers from going into the mine for the rest of the day.

Only today was the first rescue team sent down to try to bring out five miners whose location had been established, said Valery Korchagin, a spokesman for the Emergency Ministry. It was not clear, however, whether the miners were still alive, he said.

The second explosion destroyed the main air shaft and all of the mine's above-ground structures, the governor of the Siberian region of Kemerovo told Prime Minister Vladimir Putin during a meeting with emergency officials, according to a government transcript.

By late yesterday, it was still too dangerous to enter the mine because of high levels of methane gas, said Emergency Minister Sergei Shoigu, who flew to the scene from Moscow to take charge of the operation. "Now we have to do everything possible to avoid a third explosion," the state news agency RIA Novosti quoted him as telling miners' families.

The first blast, believed to have been caused by methane, hit the Raspadskaya mine just before midnight Saturday and the second about three hours later. There were 359 workers below ground at the time of the first explosion, the Emergency Ministry said. A total of 58 people were injured.

"It's clear the situation is difficult," Putin said "We could even say very difficult, tragic. Dozens of people remain in the mine. ... Their fate is unknown. And the saddest thing is that additional rescuers cannot be sent into the mine right away."

He ordered emergency workers to use all means available to ventilate the mine as quickly as possible.

The mine is 500 metres deep and has 370 kilometres of underground tunnels, said Aman Tuleyev, the Kemerovo governor. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pakistani Taliban 'intimately involved' with NYC plot: U.S. attorney general

WASHINGTON Saying they obtained new evidence, senior White House officials said yesterday that the Pakistani Taliban were behind the failed Times Square car bombing.

The attempt marks the first time the group has been able to launch an attack on U.S. soil. And while U.S. officials have downplayed the threat — citing the bomb's lack of sophistication — the incident in Times Square and the Christmas Day airline bomb attempt indicate growing strength by overseas terrorist groups linked to al-Qaida even as the CIA says their operations are seriously degraded. The finding also raises new questions about the U.S. relationship with Pakistan, which is widely known to have al-Qaida and other terrorist groups operating within its borders.

"We know that they helped facilitate it; we know that they helped direct it," said Attorney General Eric Holder. "And I suspect that we are going to come up with evidence which shows that they helped to finance it. They were intimately involved in this plot."

John Brennan, the president's homeland security and counterterrorism adviser, made similar remarks, linking the bomber to the Tehrik-e-Taliban Pakistan.

Faisal Shahzad, a U.S. citizen, is believed to have spent five months in Pakistan before returning to the United States in February and preparing his attack. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News in brief

U.K. The two parties that could form Britain's next government held hours of closed-door talks yesterday without reaching a power-sharing deal, and there are fears that the political uncertainty could stoke market jitters when trading reopens today. Conservatives and Liberal Democrats have a "mountain to climb" on issues including electoral reform, a senior member of the Liberal Democrats said. The divide could offer an opening for Prime Minister Gordon Brown's Labour Party to stay in power through a coalition with the Liberal Democrats and some smaller parties. Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg wasn't involved in talks with Conservatives yesterday, but he met with Brown that afternoon and had what a spokesman said was an "amicable discussion." Rail could link regions

Just when Ottawa's proposed light rail plans, complicated by an upcoming election, tricky tunnel logistics and uncertain funding, seem further away than ever, a study by the National Capital Commission, Gatineau and Ottawa may be about to propose a rail link across the river.

The light rail loop would link the National Gallery, Parliament Buildings and War Museum on the Ontario side with Place de Portage and the Museum of Civilization on the Quebec side.

While such a setup would be a boon to tourists, it's primarily looked at as a solution to our cross-border commuter gridlock. During a typical morning rush, OC Transpo moves about 5,000 people per hour into Gatineau, while STO transports about 2,000 people back this way.

Rideau and Wellington streets are thus jammed with two transit systems' buses, each often returning home practically empty. Add the inevitable crush of car commuters and those few bridges across the river become major choke points.

With transfers from existing transit on both sides of the river and trains running at five-minute intervals, the loop could not only break up the bus clog, but also take a number of cars off the bridges by making transit more attractive, increasing ridership and revenue for both OC Transpo and STO.

"While such a setup would be a boon to tourists, it's primarily looked at as a solution to our cross-border commuter gridlock."

The question of who picks up the cheque is always a tricky one, but with two municipalities, two provinces and the feds at the table, the burden could well be bearable if the political will can be found.

The price tag, estimated at $110 million to $200 million when the plan was last floated in 2001, is a fraction of the projected and ever-increasing cost of Ottawa's own light rail plans, for which the downtown tunnel alone starts at $600 million and is almost certain to rise.

The interprovincial loop, should it come to pass, could serve as a trial run for more light rail, showing residents what can be done with trains and perhaps adding new impetus to Ottawa's plans. Improvements to Bayview and LeBreton stations to accommodate this project could serve as a head start on the Ottawa line.

The transit link would finally give OC Transpo and STO a reason to co-operate and co-ordinate for mutual benefit, and would break down the two-solitude dynamic that continues to divide the National Capital Region.

Many Gatineau and Ottawa dwellers spend most of their lives on their own side of the river. Light rail would make it easier not just for tourists and commuters, but residents in general to scoot across and see what the rest of their region has to offer.

Climate change deal at a dead end: Minister

The chance of a climate change agreement this year is remote because the United States and China are unwilling to make more commitments during the talks, India's environment minister said yesterday.

The last UN conference on climate change in Copenhagen last December was seen as deeply disappointing as a deep rift showed between industrialized nations and developing countries.

The next major UN climate conference is in Cancun, Mexico, in December.

"The prospect of a breakthrough in 2010 is very, very remote," Jairam Ramesh told reporters in Beijing after finishing talks with his Chinese counterpart.

India is the world's fifth largest emitter of greenhouse gases and one of the largest players in securing any deal.

"We've reached virtually a dead end" with neither the United States nor China — the world's top two emitters of heat-trapping greenhouse gases — unwilling to make any firm commitments, Ramesh said.

Worth mentioning

Canada, Quebec rift remains: Duceppe

Two decades after the death of the Meech Lake accord, Quebec sovereigntists say a deep rift remains between the province and the rest of Canada.

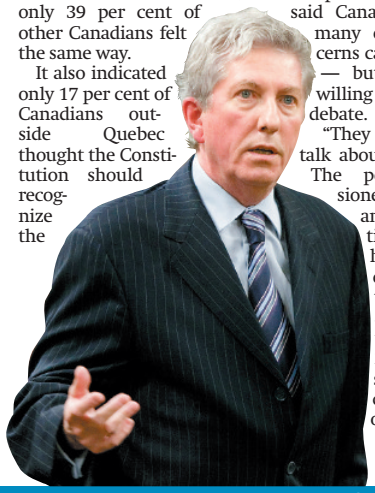
The possibility of reforms to Canadian federalism is simply an illusion for Quebecers, Bloc Québécois Leader Gilles Duceppe told a party meeting Saturday.

"Canadians have moved on to other things," he said. "They build their country as they see fit, that's all. They're no longer open to satisfying the ambitions of Quebecers. Federalism is a dead end for Quebec."

He said a recent poll published by a sovereigntist organization only served to confirm what he witnessed during his cross Canada trip last month — that very few people outside Quebec are willing to re-open the constitutional debate.

The poll suggested that while 82 per cent of Quebecers favoured a new round of constitutional talks designed to get Quebec's signature on the Constitution, only 39 per cent of other Canadians felt the same way.

It also indicated only 17 per cent of Canadians outside Quebec thought the Constitution should recognize the province as a nation. Some 73 per cent of Quebecers polled agreed with the statement.



Gilles Duceppe

Pierre Drouilly, who helped author the poll, said Canadians believe many of these concerns can be resolved — but they aren't willing to re-open the debate.

"They don't want to talk about it," he said.

The poll, commissioned by the Bloc and a sovereigntist association, has a margin of error of three percentage points, 19 times out of 20. One-thousand Quebecers and 1,000 other Canadians were surveyed.

Duceppe said talk of the Constitution "often solicited a shrug of the shoulders" when he mentioned it during his recent Canadian tour.

His words were echoed by Philip Resnick, a University of British Columbia professor who participated in Saturday's meeting.

He said Canadians have swept constitutional talks under the rug, even while it remains a bone of contention with some Quebecers.

This year marks a number of significant anniversaries for the sovereignty movement, from the Meech Lake anniversary and the subsequent election of Duceppe, to the 30th anniversary of the 1980 sovereignty referendum and the 15th of the failed 1995 referendum. THE CANADIAN PRESS

April job growth best in years

Jobs opened up across Canada in April, with the biggest monthly gain since 2002 as employment jumped by 109,000.

The gain continues a strong trend, but with one difference: Since July 2009, most new jobs have been full-time. But in April, nearly 60 per cent of the new jobs were part-time.

"A veritable jobs gusher," enthused Stewart Hall, economist with HSBC Securities (Canada).

But he tempered his view by noting that the jobs are mostly in the service sector.

"In that the goods sector led the economy down the path to recession, it is a little disappointing that the goods sector failed to really participate in the jobs recovery," he noted.

Because more Canadians went looking for work in April, the national unemployment rate dropped only one-tenth of a point to 8.1 per cent.

Erin Weir, economist with the United Steelworkers, cautioned that the big jump in the overall number masks the fact that many of the new jobs are relatively low-paying.

In 2009, Canada's average hourly wage was $20.44, he noted. The new jobs are overwhelmingly in service industries that pay lower wages in the $14 to $19 an hour range.

All the job gains were in the private sector, according to Statistics Canada,

Ben Cohen, left, and Jerry Greenfield of Ben & Jerry's ice-cream have addressed climate and political issues through their popular desserts.

The real scoop on Ben & Jerry's

Ice-cream icons add fair trade to flavours

ROMINA MCGUINNESS
Metro World News

When in 1978, two friends took a $5 correspondence course on ice cream making and opened a shop in a gas station in Burlington, Vt., nobody would have predicted the scale or scope of their success.

Although sold to multinational Unilever in 2000, for the past 30 years, Ben Cohen and Jerry Greenfield, of Ben & Jerry's ice cream, have been everything from peace activists, to rainforest conservationists and political messengers.

As they announce the 100 per cent transition to fair trade by 2013, Metro speaks to the flavoursome duo about chocolate brownies, sustainable farming and makeshift solar panels.

Q Why the move to fair trade?

A BEN: We want to be able to help the people that find themselves at the bottom of the totem pole, integrating social and economic concerns into our product.

The move further reinforces the fact that our company is values-led and not market-driven. Most companies will simply assess what it is that consumers want and the levels of demand and then look no further beyond filling those needs. What Ben and Jerry aims to do (is) to be ahead of the game in such a way that we are not led by demand, but by our internal values, principles and beliefs, such as supporting fair trade.

Q Where will the ingredients be sourced from mainly?

A JERRY: Ingredients are being sourced from all around the world. Of the top of my head I can say that our bananas come from Ecuador, vanilla from India, cocoa from Ivory Coast and the Dominican Republic and walnuts and almonds from Pakistan.

Q What does becoming 100 per cent fair-trade represent on a bigger scale?

A BEN: In the U.S., the shift to sourcing the entirety of our ingredients from fair-trade sources is breaking ground although in Europe, we are simple following the trend (in the U.K., recognition of fair-trade products is approximately 80 per cent, in the U.S., less than 30 per cent).

Q Ben & Jerry's is famous for using the product as a manner of addressing sensitive issues such as climate change, gay rights, politics and global warming. How did this need to make a point come about?

A BEN: Ice cream is such a sweet and innocent communication tool through which we can tackle tough issues. Business can be at the root of many social problems, something Jerry and I have never wanted to be part of. I guess we never realized we were pioneers seeing how clueless we were, but we did know that we wanted to find a way for our business to serve the needs of society, especially for those economically oppressed.

JERRY: In the '80s we had the "peace pop," chocolate on a stick, aimed at redirecting money from the military budget into peace activities ... we had the "American Pie," that was about the federal budget pie and how too much of taxpayers' money was being spent on defence by the Pentagon ... we also had the "Rainforest crunch" that indirectly went towards rainforest preservation.

Injury sidelines Woods

GOLF Tiger Woods withdrew from The Players Championship yesterday with an injury that he fears might be a bulging disc in his upper back.

"I've been playing with a bad neck for about a month," Woods said.

Tiger Woods

After hitting his drive well to the right on the seventh hole, Woods called for an official. He hit his second shot and grimaced, then walked to the middle of the fairway to shake hands with playing partner Jason Bohn before leaving on a golf cart.

Woods had his head bowed for several minutes as he sat in front of his locker, and other times kept his eyes closed as if he were in the middle of a nap before answering questions from three reporters. At one point, he slammed his golf shoe to the ground.

"I've been playing through it," Woods said quietly. "I can't play through it anymore."

He said he first felt the injury before the Masters and plans to have an MRI next week. He said he was having a hard time with the pain, and that there was a tingling sensation on his right side down to his fingers.

Tim Clark of South Africa finished off a record 36-hole comeback at the TPC Sawgrass with a 5-under 67 to rally from seven shots behind on the weekend and win The Players Championship over hard-luck Robert Allenby of Australia. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canucks stay alive

(Chicago leads series 3-2)

Canucks 4 Blackhawks 1

Kevin Bieksa scored two goals, Roberto Luongo made 29 saves last night and the Vancouver Canucks beat the Chicago Blackhawks 4-1 to stay alive in the Western Conference semifinals.

Chicago leads the series 3-2 and now it heads back to Vancouver — where the Blackhawks captured Games 3-4 — for Game 6 tomorrow night.

Vancouver, which gave up four power-play goals in a 7-4 loss in Game 4 on Friday night, played a more disciplined game based on speed. And the Canucks got the kind of performance they needed from Olympic gold medallist Luongo following three straight losses to the Blackhawks.

Christian Ehrhoff opened the scoring for the Canucks, just 59 seconds into the game, quickly quieting the crowd at the United Center who had hoped to see the Blackhawks make the conference finals for a second straight season.

The series winner will face San Jose.

Chicago finally scored with just more than seven minutes left when Jonathan Toews tipped in a long shot from between the circles by Duncan Keith. Alex Burrows added an empty-netter for the Canucks with 44.6 seconds left.

Ehrhoff's long slapshot from the right point just inside the blue-line eluded a screened Antti Niemi to give the Canucks the early lead.

Luongo then stopped a shot by Toews from close-in at the left circle and also denied Patrick Sharp with Tomas Kopecky trying to screen the goalie. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BASEBALL Dallas Braden pitched the 19th perfect game in major league history, shutting down the majors' hottest team and leading the Oakland Athletics to a 4-0 victory over the Tampa Bay Rays yesterday.

Braden threw his arms in the air after Gabe Kapler grounded out to shortstop for the final out. The closest the Rays got to a hit was Jason Bartlett's liner to third leading off the game. Evan Longoria tried to bunt against Braden leading off the fifth, drawing boos from the small crowd.

"It's without a doubt a team effort," Braden said. "You got eight guys out there chasing balls and knocking balls down for me. So this is ours, not just mine, this is ours."

It was the majors' first perfect game since Mark Buehrle did it for the White Sox against the Rays July 23, and the second no-hitter this season after Colorado's Ubaldo Jimenez pulled it off in Atlanta on April 17.

HOCKEY Alexander Ovechkin scored the deciding goal yesterday to give two-time defending champion Russia a 3-1 victory over Slovakia at the ice hockey world championship.

BASEBALL Fred Lewis hit a three-run homer off Bobby Jenks to rally the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-7 win over the Chicago White Sox yesterday. Jenks (1-1) failed to retire any of the four batters he faced. Travis Snider doubled and John Buck singled before Lewis drove a 3-1 pitch into the right-field seats to give the Blue Jays an 8-7 lead. James Beagle has always loved dogs. His grandparents had two border collies and his own family had a boxer.

Early on, Beagle, who's now 50, learned that these creatures make a mess. His job was to scoop up the poop from the backyard. He didn't mind.

But he did mind being bored. So when the Toronto-born Beagle first went to university and found the courses too similar to those in high school, he dropped out after a year and worked in security.

And met up with dogs again. During a training session, his new bosses suited him up in protective gear and put him in a cage with vicious dogs. He learned that they'd run if he ran away, but would cover if they advanced on the dogs. (The skill came in handy many years later.)

Beagle began working in the hotel and restaurant industry, where he learned a lot about working with people.

But he longed to work outside, and work for himself. He came up with the idea of scooping dog poop out of backyards as a business. He asked his friends and family if they thought it was a good idea. "Nobody would ever pay for that," they said.

Undeterred, he got friends to ask around and soon found a few busy families who had no time for their dog poo.

Beagle went to work in 1985, scooping in yards in the daytime and working in restaurant and hotels at night. After raising his rates (it used to be as low as $6 a week) and getting some media coverage, five years into his business Beagle was able to quit his other job and focus entirely on Super Scoopers.

He works five days a week, and begins his day by checking his email and dealing with bills and scheduling. He then heads out in his truck with his bichon frise Boo Boo. Beagle goes directly into a client's backyard and uses gloves, a scoop, a paint scraper and a bucket for the job.

Beagle stores the dog waste in the back of his truck and then in freezers in his garage. He disposes of it every few days at a waste disposal station or sewage treatment plant.

He can clear a yard he's familiar with in as little as five minutes.

"I already know where the hot spots are." Boo Boo sometimes helps find the hidden gems.

Nostalgic remakes

Hollywood taps into audience's familiarity

It's hardly a mystery why Hollywood studios keep putting out remakes and sequels — they make money. But why do we as an audience eat it up so readily?

"If the cake tasted good the first time, why not eat it again?" Professor of film studies Christopher Sharrett of Seton Hall University asks.

Hollywood, Sharrett says, is basically owned by six different corporations and as a result, "they treat cinema as one more commodity and they look to see what's been paying off lately and might lend itself to 3-D remakes."

What's been paying off seems almost exclusively to be stories that are already ingrained in popular culture.

"In the '90s they made a Beverly Hillbillies movie and a Coneheads movie and those were from late '60s early '70s television," says Dave White, movie critic at movies.com. "As you find what people are nostalgic for, what people reference, somebody at a studio says 'hmmm.'"

That comfortable familiarity guarantees a stress-free movie-going experience — perfect when everyone is in the summer vacation mindset. Since we want to see everything we've seen before, it's no surprise that pop culture of the '80s has played a major role in this summer's blockbuster offerings — like The Karate Kid remake.

"I think what's interesting about the '80s is you had a lot of iconic characters who were born then, like Indiana Jones and Freddy Krueger, and I don't think movies in recent years have had that," says Kirthana Ramisetti, managing editor of predicto.com. "It's just easier than trying to come up with a new monster for them to just take Freddy Krueger and use some CGI."

This doesn't mean filmmakers have it easy. "I'll have to admit that when I was approached to do this, I was terrified," says Samuel Bayer, the director of the new version of Nightmare on Elm Street, now in theatres. "But I wanted this to be a serious, straight up horror film. The fact that we have an academy award nominated actor as Freddy should signal just how serious we are."

Entertainment in brief

LEGAL Roman Polanski's attorneys argued in court filings Friday that the Swiss government should not automatically assume an extradition request by Los Angeles prosecutors is accurate. The statement is in response to a comment by a Swiss justice official, who told The Associated Press last month that officials there assume facts in an extradition request are correct. The official said the justice ministry was not interested in the transcripts of testimony offered in secret earlier this year by the former prosecutor who handled Polanski's case. Polanski's attorneys contend the transcripts will show the extradition papers contain information prosecutors know is "false and materially incomplete."

A flood of relief to U.S.

Country stars, including Taylor Swift, are leading the flood relief efforts in Nashville, Tenn., Starmagazine.com reported.

Taylor donated $500,000 US during a call into a star-studded telethon Thursday on local station WSMV. The telethon, hosted by Vince Gill, raised over $1.7 million.

The cleanup effort is expected to cost more than $1 billion.

"It was the craziest thing that I've ever seen," Taylor said on the telethon.

"I was at my house in Hendersonville, we were staring out the window, thinking it didn't seem like rain. It just seemed like something in a movie. It was really emotional for me because those are the streets I learned to drive on.

"People's houses are just ruined. It was so heartbreaking to see that in my town, the place that I call home, and the place that I feel most safe. I just send my love to my friends and neighbours who got hit harder than I did."

Country singers, many of whom live in Nashville, have also been part of the relief efforts. Keith Urban said seeing the Grand Ole Opry House under water was "chilling."

Another telethon is planned for May 16 with Brad Paisley, Dierks Bentley, and Lady Antebellum, among other guests.

Tim McGraw and Faith Hill are also organizing a benefit to be held next month.

Meanwhile, Jack White and his staff at Third Man Records are also lending a hand to Nashville's flood victims.

White told The Associated Press that profits from Saturday's sales at his downtown record store will go to flood relief.

White, a member of The White Stripes and The Dead Weather, and a resident of nearby Franklin, and employees of Third Man will join Hands On Nashville today to aid in the cleanup.

At least 31 people were killed in three states, including 20 in Tennessee, when storms dropped record amounts of rain.

Resealing the deal

LOVE IS IN THE AIR To mark their fifth wedding anniversary, Heidi Klum and Seal renewed their vows in front of their children and close family members Saturday at sunset in Costa Careyes, Mexico, Usmagazine.com reported.

"The theme this year was brides and grooms," a source tell UsMagazine.com. "All the guests wore black and white and dressed themselves like brides and grooms. The minister was available to do vow renewals for anyone else who wanted them."

Klum, 36, and Seal, 47, have made a tradition of renewing their vows every year. Last year, they had a "white trash" theme ceremony, during which Klum wore her hair in cornrows and Seal sported a mullet (the officiant was even dressed as Elvis Presley).

She said renewing their vows also is something their kids, Leni, 6, Henry, 4, Johan, 3, and seven-month-old Lou, "have gotten accustomed to. It's like, 'Hey, Mom and Dad love each other and they get married every year!'"

Oprah gets the goods

SORRY BUT THE YEARS OF SAYING YOUR NOT TOGETHER JUST CONFIRMED THAT YOU WERE Rob Pattinson and Kristen Stewart found one person they were unable to hide their relationship from: Oprah Winfrey.

The Twilight stars reportedly confirmed to the talk-show host that they're an item when they taped an interview with her to air this week.

"We were all briefed before the show how to handle the talent. Part of what we were told was that Rob and Kristen are dating," a source tells E! News.

"Obviously Oprah had to ask something during the taping, but agreed beforehand she wouldn't be too hard on them if they told her what was really going on."

Ginny Weasley to wed?

IT WAS MAGIC ON SET Love has blossomed on the set of the final Harry Potter movie, as 19-year-old actress Bonnie Wright, who plays flame-haired teen wizard Ginny Weasley, has reportedly agreed to marry co-star Jamie Campbell Bower, according to the Daily Mail.

"They met on the set of the movie and Jamie fell for Bonnie really badly," a source says of the couple, who have been dating for six months. "He says they are completely in love. It all seems very whirlwind, but they both say it's the real deal."

According to the source, Bower, who also appears in the successful Twilight franchise, popped the question last month.

"All he has told us is that he asked her to marry him and Bonnie said 'yes,'" the source says.

Hanks Junior marries longtime friend

THEY SEEM QUITE SWEET TOGETHER, NO? Actor Colin Hanks tied the knot with publicist Samantha Bryant Saturday in Los Angeles, his rep confirms to People.

Hanks is the son of Tom Hanks and the late Samantha Lewes, who died in 2002. Engaged since last June, Hanks, 32, is currently starring in the indie film Barry Munday and in a new FOX series, The Good Guys, premiering May 19. The couple met through mutual friends, Hanks told the New York Times last year.

"We had the same group of friends and knew of each other, but never paid attention to it," he said. Until things turned romantic. "He was the perfect gentleman," Bryant told the paper.

The designer, Rigby and Peller, sent the singer seven sets of handmade lingerie, but only three were returned via courier in time for their big runway show.

"Obviously we were delighted that Lady Gaga wanted to use our new pieces in her next video, but we did stress we needed them back in plenty of time for our press show," a Rigby and Peller spokesman says.

"They are all hand-made and unique designs that are simply priceless and are not available anywhere in the world, so we are really disappointed not to get them back in time for our major showcase of the year."

Heartland Meatloaf

INGREDIENTS:

2 large onions, chopped
2 large celery ribs, chopped
1 large green bell pepper, chopped
3 garlic cloves, minced
2 lbs lean ground beef
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
1 egg white
1 tsp salt
1/2 tsp freshly ground black pepper
2 cups chopped canned tomatoes in purée
1/4 cup ketchup

METHOD:

1 Preheat oven to 350°F. Lightly coat 13 x 9-inch baking dish and large non-stick skillet with nonstick cooking spray. Set skillet over medium-high heat. Sauté onions, celery, green pepper and garlic until soft, about 5 minutes. Transfer vegetables to large bowl.

2 Add beef, bread crumbs, egg white, salt and pepper to vegetables in bowl and mix with hands. Combine tomatoes and ketchup in small bowl, add half to meatloaf mixture and mix again.

3 Transfer meatloaf mixture to baking dish and shape into 10 x 7-inch loaf, mounding slightly in centre. Make lengthwise groove down centre with side of hand. Pour remaining tomato mixture into groove. Bake meat loaf until instant-read thermometer inserted in centre reaches 165°F (74°C), about 1 hour 15 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before slicing.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
If you lose your temper today you will go all the way and give some unfortunate soul your very personal equivalent of Hell.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
You will either do something spectacular or something really stupid today. It's simply impossible to predict which way you will jump.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Why are you so defensive? What makes you think the world is ganging up on you? Whatever the reason try not to overreact. Only you will suffer.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
Moderation is essential today, especially when dealing with people who don't take kindly to being told what to do. Not everyone shares your vision.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
If you are going to be forceful, if you are going to get tough, then it might as well be today. You'll do whatever it takes to get your way — and then some.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
Try not to be too pushy today. You could easily go over the top. If people seem to be avoiding you it could be because they are scared of you.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
Libra, indecisive? Never! Once you make up your mind about something you go all the way and you'll go all the way and then a bit further today.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
Someone with an extremely strong personality — someone very much like you in fact — will have a major effect on your life today.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
Today's aspects urge you to be ruthless, to cut out everything that does not need to be done immediately, especially on the work front.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
Anyone who stands in your way is asking for trouble. You are the boss and anyone who does not accept that is going to regret it. Be assertive, but be fair as well.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
Once you start arguing with a partner or loved one you may find it hard to stop today, so don't start in the first place. Bite your lip.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
The problem you are confronted with today might look difficult but once you start to deal with it you will find it is not so bad after all.
